To improve rehabilitation for patients across the world

As Physical Therapy becomes progressively more important in Active Aging and rehabilitation, it becomes as important that physical therapists have access to specialized equipment in order to deliver better outcomes to their patients.

To deliver the specialized equipment that care givers need, Taiwan headquartered Dyaco International is set to expand into new territories across Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) to launch a new line of specialty medical and rehabilitation equipment in selected countries under the brand licensing agreement with Philips, the global leader in health technology.

The new Philips Physical Therapy Solutions are developed to deliver better outcomes through innovation in health technology and improve rehabilitation for patients across the world.

Both the ReCare medically certified line and the ReActiv commercial line of solutions will be available through exclusive representatives across the regions. The initial offering will include a treadmill, two seated total body ergometers including one for wheelchair users, a recumbent ergometer, and an upright ergometer all aimed at improving patient comfort, fit, and experience during their rehabilitation journey. "We are passionate about improving the lives and wellbeing of people all over the globe and see this move as the next logical step in fulfilling that mission," added Spencer Ramsey, Senior Director Brand Licensing at Philips.
