BioSpectrum
the business of Bio & Health Sciences
ASIA EDITION

Doctor Anywhere to build largest omni-channel healthcare service provider in Asia

January 27, 2021 | News

Builds regional tech hubs in Vietnam and India

Doctor Anywhere (DA) has announced that it is establishing regional tech hubs in Vietnam, Ho Chi Minh and India, Bangalore, as well as expanding the core product development and engineering functions in the Singapore headquarters. This expansion will play a critical role in DA's continued growth in the region.

Available positions include entry to senior level roles. Leadership positions will be based in Singapore, with regional leads to manage a team of entry-level and experienced software engineers in each country. The Vietnam hub will also have the opportunity to collaborate closely with the local DA offices to tailor solutions that align with market demands. DA's existing tech teams based in Bangalore and Gurgaon will form part of the expanded India hub.

The recruitment drive has started since the beginning of the year. DA aims to bring all new hires onboard by the second quarter of 2021. DA will also be hiring fresh graduates from local universities, and providing opportunities for growth and regional exposure within the company. The new tech hubs will triple DA's product development and engineering capacity, as the company continues to expand and deepen their presence in the regional healthcare landscape.

Ho Chi Minh City and Bangalore boost exceptional engineering talent, strong infrastructure, and are well positioned geographically to engage the region. The launch of the regional tech hubs will enhance DA's mission to build the largest omni-channel healthcare platform in Southeast Asia, and expand their capabilities to bring reliable and high quality healthcare conveniently to the public.