February 2, 2022 | News

The agreement will play an important role in advancing both behavioural health research and care

Holmusk, a leading global data science and health technology company building the world's largest real-world evidence (RWE) platform for behavioural health, has signed an agreement with Metrocare Services based in Dallas, Texas on the use of real-world data to drive the development of tools for improvements for mental health care.

Metrocare Services is the largest provider of mental health and developmental disability services in North Texas, serving over 55,000 adults and children every year.

The agreement will play an important role in advancing both behavioural health research and care by enhancing Holmusk's RWE platform through secured, de-identified AI-powered analytic models that help drive improved clinical outcomes. In addition, Metrocare will have access to Holmusk's data analytics tools to provide insights that will improve the delivery of care within its health system.
