Malaysian startup Qmed Asia has announced regional expansion into Taiwan, Indonesia, Vietnam, and Cambodia to introduce value-added services to healthcare segments and patients in the form of innovative digital health solutions that are accessible, affordable, and reliable.

The startup recently signed two memoranda of understanding (MoU) with Taiwanese companies, Eucare Co Ltd, a leading 24/7 online medical consultation platform, and Ubestream Inc, a listed company providing cloud-to-end artificial intelligence (AI) semantic technology integration solutions, to expand its solutions offering to Taiwan healthcare providers for smarter clinical assistance supported by AI semantic technology.

In Indonesia, Qmed Asia has partnered with one of the leading Indonesia Insurance providers in launching its mobile live queue solution for local hospitals to reduce long wait times when seeking medical attention and improve the overall patient experience in healthcare facilities.

Prior to this, Qmed Asia participated in Vietnam's largest and most prestigious annual startup competition, Vietnam Start-Up Day, and emerged in the top five out of 150 international participants from 32 countries.

Less than a week after the recognition, Qmed Asia signed an MoU with MeetDoctor, a one-stop digital health platform offering online consultation, medicine delivery, home lab testing, and medical appointments in Cambodia.
