BioSpectrum
the business of Bio & Health Sciences
ASIA EDITION

Docquity and Vietnam Association of Preventive Medicine partner to advance medical training

August 21, 2024 | News

Initiative expands Docquity's community of preventive medicine doctors in Vietnam

Docquity, Southeast Asia's largest healthcare professional (HCP) network, is partnering with the Vietnam Association of Preventive Medicine (VAPM) to enhance medical training for preventive medicine doctors and health staff in Vietnam.

As part of the collaboration, a dedicated VAPM channel has been launched on the Docquity platform, where educational courses, training workshops, and other resources will be developed and rolled out to over 2,000 Vietnamese preventive medicine HCPs during the next three years. Doctors can earn participation certificates by joining these learning sessions. The hub also fosters a conducive environment where VAPM members can engage with each other, share knowledge, and stay informed about the latest advancements in preventive medicine.

The partnership is expected to propel the growth of Docquity's preventive medicine HCP community in Vietnam, further enhancing the reach and impact of the platform.

Besides providing a robust and secure technological infrastructure, Docquity will work closely with VAPM to ensure the content aligns with Vietnam's Ministry of Health regulations and guidelines, guaranteeing accuracy, quality, and relevance.

Image caption- Prof. PhD. Phan Trong Lan, VAPM's President (left) and Christophe Meugnier, CCO and General Manager of Vietnam & Thailand, Docquity (right)