LKCMedicine is a partnership between Nanyang Technological University (NTU) and Imperial College London.

The Lee Kong Chian School of Medicine (LKCMedicine) officially opened its Novena Campus and has become fully operational.

LKCMedicine is a partnership between Nanyang Technological University (NTU) and Imperial College London. The dual-campus school - with another building at NTU's main campus at Jurong West - admitted its first batch of students in 2013.

The 20-storey Clinical Sciences Building is located in the heart of Health City Novena, with links to Tan Tock Seng Hospital (TTSH) and a number of specialist centres and community care services.

The National Healthcare Group (NHG), which manages TTSH, is the medical school's primary clinical partner. This is the first time the group has a medical school as part of their healthcare campus in Novena.

Deputy Prime Minister Teo Chee Hean, who officiated the opening stated that Singapore's medical community must continue to serve with heart to care for patients in a holistic manner.
